At Early Connections, we have a different approach to the role of Center Directors in an early education program. We honor and respect the education and leadership that is required to create a quality environment that supports children, families and teachers. Our model allows directors to coach teachers, implement curriculum, engage with families and promote a quality setting that prepares children and families for school and life success.

Early Connections has a centralized structure for marketing, enrollment, setting and collecting fees and human resources which allows our Center Directors to focus on what's really important – building relationships with children and families. We offer additional support for our staff you won't find in other early education organizations, including a Certified Nursing Assistant (CNA) and two Behavioral Health Specialists on staff to assist with children's health and social emotional development. We also offer professional development opportunities and provide support for curriculum, assessment and family engagement. Unlike many early education organizations, we manage most of our classrooms with lower teacher/child ratios.
